Guidelines SOCN21

The purpose of this course is to give the student the opportunity to learn occupationally relevant knowledge, develop a sociological/social anthropological perspective that makes it possible to simultaneously understand and see the possibilities for applying sociological/social anthropological knowledge and skills to tasks and assignments within the organization. Therefore, the course allows time and credits for both occupational practice and academic analysis of activities undertaken and contextual factors in the work setting. As the internship is part of an education and the student's learning must be in focus, no salary can be paid.

The course lasts approximately 16 weeks, with an average workweek of 30-35 hours. The rest of the time (up to full-time) should be set aside for academic activities, which include participating in teaching (lectures and seminars), keeping an activity logbook and working on the examination assignments.

In the logbook, the student describes the main activities performed during the internship. Notes should be made continuously chronologically (preferably daily but at least once a week) and the logbook should be verified by the internship supervisor after completing the internship. The examination assignments consist of a mid-seminar report (to be discussed at a mid-seminar) and the writing of a reflection paper (to be discussed at an examination seminar).

The specific learning goals of the course are found in the course syllabus (<http://kursplaner.lu.se/pdf/kurs/en/SOCN21>).
